GGR 482 Toronto Field Course
Planning Modernity: Post-War Toronto
Fall 2018

This course explores the social, economic, political and planning dynamics behind the making of Toronto’s modernist residential and commercial landscapes since World War II. The course takes a broad approach focusing on the rise of modernist planning, the processes of creative destruction, and the political economy of metropolitan development to examine the emergence of the city’s modernist built form. The mixed undergraduate/graduate course is organized around a combination of seminar classes and field trips in the Toronto area and will take place between September and December 2018. For more information write to Professors Hess or Lewis.

Instructors
Professor Paul Hess | 416-978-4955 | hess@geog.utoronto.ca
Professor Robert Lewis | 416-978-1590 | lewis@geog.utoronto.ca

Sign Up
Places are limited to 10 undergraduate students.

Cost
There is a minimal additional cost (typically transit fare) to cover travel to and from the field sites.