Professor Sharlene Mollett’s wide-ranging research deals with critical development geography, race and racialization, feminist political ecology, property rights, political ecology, biodiversity, Indigenous and Afro-descendant land struggles, postcolonial geographies, Indigenous feminisms, feminist theory, feminist methods, ethnographic methods and gender and land rights with a focus on Latin America, Honduras and Panama. At the Association of American Geographers conference in San Francisco on March 31, 2016, she delivered the Jan Monk Distinguished Lecture, a distinction ‘awarded to a prominent scholar who has made significant contributions to feminist geography’. Professor Mollett’s Intersections presentation will be based on that Lecture, which will be published in the journal Gender, Place & Culture.

Irreconcilable Differences? A Feminist-Postcolonial Reading of Gender, Development and Human Rights in Latin America

Sharlene Mollett
Assistant Professor
Department of Human Geography
Centre for Critical Development Studies
University of Toronto Scarborough

Friday. 30. Sep. 2016.
3:00-5:00pm. SS2125.
100 St. George Street
Toronto ON M5S 3G3